Version: SD-Base
Length: 30
Airdate: 10/29/2006 5:30:00 PM/502
Service: PBS-PLUS
Format: Documentary

This documentary chronicles the extraordinary march across the U.S. by political activist Doris Haddock. Passionate about democracy, she walked 3,200 miles from Pasadena, California, to Washington, DC, to dramatize the need to restore representative government in America and reduce the role of special interest money in politics. The film records her travels and conveys the infectious enthusiasm Granny D. inspired in the people she met. With her feisty, unrelenting advocacy for participatory democracy, this five-foot-tall great-grandmother stands tall as a role model of commitment and passionate engagement for people of all ages. The film features an interview with Senator John McCain.

With 35 million people in America now age sixty-five and older, "the old old"-those over 85-are now considered the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. While medical advances have enabled an unprecedented number of Americans to live longer and healthier lives, this new longevity has also had unintended consequences. For millions of Americans, living longer also means serious chronic illness and a protracted physical decline that can require an immense amount of care, often for years and sometimes even decades. Yet just as the need for care is rising, the number of available caregivers is dwindling. With families more dispersed than ever and a healthcare system overburdened, many experts fear that we are on the threshold of a major crisis in care.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

A report of an extraordinary political scandal. The scale of corruption still coming to light dwarfs anything since Watergate. In one sense it's the age-old tale of greed, but greed encouraged now by the way our system works. Deep in the plea bargains of Jack Abramoff and his cronies is the admission that they conspired to use campaign contributions to bribe politicians; campaign finance is the core of the corruption. They took great pains to cover their tracks and they might have pulled it off except for a handful of honest people, and the work of some enterprising print reporters, Senate investigators, and the ethics team at the Department of Justice. Following the money in this story leads us through a bizarre maze of cocktail parties, golf courses, private jets, four-star restaurants, sweatshops and the chandeliered rooms frequented by the high and mighty in Washington. Stay with the twists and turns and the pieces fall into place. But keep in mind that what you're seeing is only a partial picture; we have not seen the end of Capitol crimes.

People earning the smallest paychecks in America often rely on that money to support their entire families. Six states will be voting to raise their minimum wage in the upcoming election. One of them is Missouri, where the topic has become a hot political issue. Meanwhile, Texas, home to more minimum wage workers than any other state, has no ballot initiative to raise the minimum wage, leaving workers with very desperate choices. These are the people who clean our clothes, our offices, and our hotel rooms, while most of us look the other way. How we treat them - and not just during election cycles - says a lot about our national character. In two separate reports, one on-air and one online, NOW looks at the impact of low wages on both politics and families, and what steps some are taking to fight for a "living wage".

Public opinion polls unanimously show that trust in mainstream media—the institution most responsible for keeping us informed and aware—is at an all-time low. How did we get here, and more importantly, how can we repair the damage? This week, NOW poses those questions to legendary television producer and People for the American Way founder Norman Lear. We also talk to Martin Kaplan, associate dean of USC's Annenberg School of Communication. Is mainstream media serving public or corporate interests? Issues and answers from people who've spent their lives minding the media. This week on NOW.

A report of an extraordinary political scandal. The scale of corruption still coming to light dwarfs anything since Watergate. In one sense it's the age-old tale of greed, but greed encouraged now by the way our system works. Deep in the plea bargains of Jack Abramoff and his cronies is the admission that they conspired to use campaign contributions to bribe politicians; campaign finance is the core of the corruption. They took great pains to cover their tracks and they might have pulled it off except for a handful of honest people, and the work of some enterprising print reporters, Senate investigators, and the ethics team at the Department of Justice. Following the money in this story leads us through a bizarre maze of cocktail parties, golf courses, private jets, four-star restaurants, sweatshops and the chandeliered rooms frequented by the high and mighty in Washington. Stay with the twists and turns and the pieces fall into place. But keep in mind that what you're seeing is only a partial picture; we have not seen the end of Capitol crimes.

Few people ever meet a dwarf face-to-face. In this personal journey, documentary filmmaker Steve Delano shows firsthand how a genetic mutation marks a person for life. He reveals the isolation of his school years, his "ludicrous" strategies to fit in as well as the mixed blessings of dwarfism. In this film, Delano exercises the license of stature and his irreverent sense of humor to confront head-on conventional representations and misperceptions about dwarfs. From growing up a "freak" - a form of forced celebrity - to finally accepting and asserting his difference, Delano provides an idiosyncratic perspective based on a tip-toe life, and contemplates a future where genetic engineering may eliminate "people of difference" altogether.

What is the one principle, belief, or cause for which you would sacrifice everything - including your life? Ethical, spiritual, and ideological values that are central to the human experience find their voice in the documentary film, Last Best Hope, an intimate, riveting, little-known story about the ordinary men and women in the Belgian Resistance and their extraordinary acts to save and repatriate downed Allied airmen during the Second World War. At the heart of the story is 85-year old American Bill Grosvenor, a P-47 Thunderbolt pilot who fell from the skies over Belgium and into the hands of the Resistance in 1943. Nearly sixty years later, Grosvenor is reunited with his helpers in Belgium who fought against tyranny and oppression in their homes, in their neighborhoods, and in the streets of Brussels. Resistance fighters share for the first time their daring and heartrending stories, allowing Last Best Hope to explore the myriad motivations that propel one stranger to help another, despite the risk to his or her own life and everything dear. As unexpectedly as the Gestapo snared Grosvenor in an early morning safehouse raid, Last Best Hope transports the viewer to another place and time with a universal message about faith, hope, and the undefeatable power of the human spirit. Stunning and cathartic, Last Best Hope takes even the most jaded WWII film buff by surprise.

No Detours in Heaven

The Sullivan Family of St. Stephens, Ala., has been playing old-fashioned string band and bluegrass music for half a century. These self-described "country people" see their music not simply as entertainment or art, but as a ministry, one started by the Pentecostal preacher Arthur Sullivan, who mobilized his siblings and children to provide music at revivals and brush arbor churches he pastored in the 40s. Though today the Sullivans play at major festivals, their repertoire still contains only gospel messages -- no "worldly" songs. "No Detours In Heaven" explores the cultural values embodied by the family's music and lifestyle.

Sunday, November 19, 2006                      12:30 PM      How Sweet The Sound
The fabled gospel group Clarence Fountain and the Blind Boys of Alabama were among the recent inductees into the American Gospel Quartet Hall of Fame. On "How Sweet the Sound", you'll see and hear stirring performances by this group and others in Birmingham, a city with deep gospel roots.

Sunday, November 26, 2006                      12:30 PM      Animal, Vegetable, Or Mineral:
The Art of Frank Fleming
When Frank Fleming produces one of his animal sculptures, the results sometimes surprise him. As he works, the piece "takes on its own being, it seems to have a soul"-- a reminder, he says, of nature's importance in our lives. As Fleming explains it, his childhood on a small farm in northwest Alabama sowed the seeds of his artistic success: a fertile imagination, a deep reverence for nature, and a strong work ethic.

Available Plastics, Inc. is a family owned company in Huntsville. The firm has more than 85 employees. As the business grew into a 16 million dollar company, the owners began to ask what to do once you have a successful venture? Available Plastics decided to form the CANDL Foundation. The CANDL Foundation works to help the education of children. One of the ways is through Phonics Phones, a device to help children read. "Alabama @ Work" talks with the owners about the firm, their product and foundation. Students with the Huntsville City Schools have an assignment that is out of this world. NASA and its' contractors, Teledyne Brown Engineering and Boeing, have requested the Huntsville Center for Technology create a prototype piece of hardware for the International Space Station. Astronauts will use the device in training to repair a space station rack. The hardware must be ready for a possible space shuttle launch in December.
